Guidelines for searching

To find records containing particular words or phrases, use Search for. Note that terms and operators can be entered in either upper or lower case. The operators AND, OR and NOT can (optionally) be used to define complex queries. For example, youth AND adolescents will list all records containing both of these terms, while youth NOT adolescents will list all records containing youth except those also containing adolescents. youth OR adolescents will list records containing either term.

You can search by key word or browse in the subject list for your topic. All terms in a key word search are "anded" unless you indicate otherwise.

Psychology

Let's try a key word search first.

Note: Question: My boss and I go to the same church, and I've always looked up to him as a Christian and a boss. He's training me to climb the corporate ladder at his company, which requires me to see some things that other employees probably don't see. I'm currently witnessing some underhanded and possibly illegal business dealings as we work together, and he always tells me, "It's just business." What should I do?

Guidelines for searching

Let's suppose that we wanted the articles we searched limited to topical articles, not reviews of books on business ethics. We can do a key word search, as here and add not review. Since reviews are labeled as review singular, we do not want to add an "s" to the term.

Literature

We now turn to another area of inquiry to search for info on an author.

We find a number of articles about the works of this author. Let's look however at entry 1 to illustrate a couple of features of SBPI.

First of all, the reason this entry appears at all in our list is because the author's name appears in the note.

Second, there is an indication that the article can be found in full-text by loading the Internet address given into one's browser. There is a similar note in articles in other periodicals for which full-text is available.

Higher education

We are stringing several concepts together in this fishing expedition. Let's see what we get.
